

A close-up photograph of almond blossoms in full bloom. The flowers are light pink with white petals and prominent yellow stamens. A honey bee is seen on one of the flowers, actively pollinating. The background is a soft, out-of-focus green.

every almond we eat exists because a honey bee pollinated an almond blossom

